Political foes share Chinese ancestry

By Jack Beardsley

Few Americans are aware that the two most powerful political figures in the United States share a common ancestry. The fact that the two men are of Chinese descent is a source of pride to many of their countrymen, but it is also a source of controversy. The two men are the late President Richard M. Nixon and the late Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

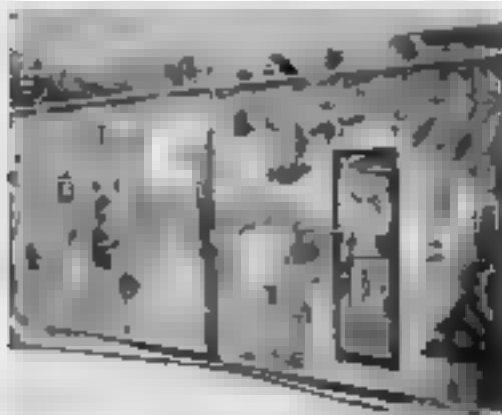

Agnew and Nixon are the two most powerful political figures in the United States. They are of Chinese descent.

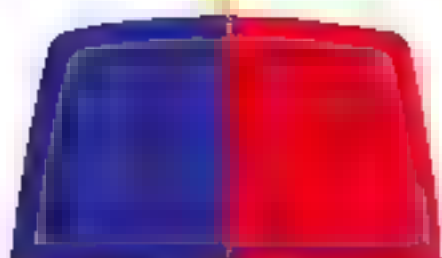

The two men are of Chinese descent. Their ancestors came to the United States in the 19th century. The Nixon family came from the state of California, and the Agnew family came from the state of Maryland. Both families have a long history in the United States.
